Dear colleagues,

At the last two EPSCO meetings in Stockholm and London we discussed how supervision could be strengthened by patient and user involvement and what signifies good practice in this aspect. At the meeting in London we also presented the result of the inventory of methods that are used in the participating organizations in the working group. We also had input from the CQC on how they as an organization engage with people that use services and Henrik Frostholm told us about their ongoing project on developing user participation in the social services in Denmark.

Now it is time to meet again this time in Reykjavik in September. The aim of the working group is to inspire further work and development in our organizations. We will discuss how we in a structured way can share experiences and knowledge between organizations and how we can engage with patient and users on different structural level in our supervisory organizations.

I am very much looking forward to meet you again in Reykjavik!

You can find information of our previous work in the working group at the EPSCO web-site
